Foreign visitors, local entrepreneurs revive Olympic venue

TERU CLAVEL

Hometown: New York, NY

Languages: English, Japanese, French, Chinese

Favorite place in Japan: The area around Tennoji in Osaka, where I spent my summers as a child

Role model or mentor: Christian Amanpour

Favorite author: Gabriel Garcia Marquez

Social media handles:
www.teruclavel.com,
Facebook: TeruClavelWriter,
Twitter: @TeruClavel

Currently listening to/reading:
Fareed Zakaria's weekly GPS podcast, NPR's All Things Considered podcast, Washington Post's "The Answer Sheet" education blog, New York Times's "Motherlode" parenting blog

Secret skill: moguratataki, identifying architectural details

Thoughts on print journalism:
We must be constantly innovating, parsing the data, and revisiting—like The New Yorker—to remain relevant.

J. T. QUIGLEY

Hometown: Voorhees, New Jersey

Most memorable interviewee: William Saito. Unimpressed with the generally risk-averse Japanese tech investors, William once told me that, here, "VC" stands for "very cowardly."

Favorite place in Japan: Asahikawa, Hokkaido. A snowboarder's paradise with incredibly friendly locals and delicious local cuisine. Big enough to have fun at the drop of a hat, but small enough to easily escape into the wilderness when you need to unplug. I'm determined to retire here one day.

Favorite author: A tie between Chuck Palahniuk and Haruki Murakami

Social media handles:
@jtquigley / jtquigley

Secret skill: I was a choir boy and sang in a few garage bands, so I can hold my own in the karaoke box.

Thoughts on print journalism:
I definitely prefer turning the pages of a paper magazine over swiping a glass surface.

ANTHONY FENSOM

Hometown: Brisbane, Australia or Tokyo, Japan

Languages: English and (average) Japanese

Years in Japan: 6

Favorite place in Japan: Tokyo

Role models: People who achieve their dreams

Places of inspiration: Libraries, bookshops, lookouts, scenic spots

Currently reading: "The Ugly Game" by Heidi Blake & Jonathan Calvert

Social media: Twitter: @a_d_fensom

Secret skill: Craft beer fan

Thoughts on print journalism:
Journalism is alive and well, even if the format may change.
